Underinsurance

Unfortunately, underinsurance only usually comes to light when a policyholder has a claim, discovering to their detriment, the effect this has on their settlement. Whilst there is no average condition in our Executive Home policies, we often find instances where a policyholder will suffer after a loss due to their sums insured being inadequate. Examples of this are:

- Where a specified item has not been valued for a while and remains on the schedule, whilst it may have the benefit of index-linking, this may not be sufficient in keeping up with market values. The maximum payable is the sum insured.
- Where a policyholder has undertaken a lot of home improvement work without giving consideration to their Buildings sum insured. Again, index-linking will apply, but often this will not be enough to account for these additional expenditures. Reinstatement following a total loss could therefore find a policyholder having to dig deep into their pocket on discovering that the sum insured was inadequate.

Always ensure that sums insured are calculated on the correct basis:

- Contents – this should represent the full replacement value of the entire contents of the home, not forgetting those in outbuildings – or the loft!
- Fine Art & Antiques – this should represent the full market value, so you will need to be aware of market trends.
- Jewellery – As most jewellery items will be unique in their origin, this should represent the current market value.
- Buildings – this should represent the full cost of rebuilding the home to its existing specification, not forgetting to include an element for architects', surveyors' and legal fees, plus the cost of debris removal.

Arriving at the correct sums insured is not always easy without some assistance and we can provide this in a number of ways:

- Contents – A room by room guide is available to undertake an exercise in helping to ensure that everything is included.
- Jewellers are usually able to provide valuations on jewellery and watches, but do ensure they hold an IRV qualification to be able to do this.
- The ABI.BCIS website provides some useful guidance on assessing home rebuilding costs, including access to a suitable calculator that can be used to provide an estimated rebuild cost based on a number of given factors.

Having established correct sums insured, these should always be checked on a regular basis to ensure that they are in keeping with any market trends.
